

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT, famous for his superb characterization in the title rôle of "Liliom," who will be seen in "Peer Gynt," a regular Theater Guild production, with scenes by Lee Simonson, scheduled to open late in January.

NAZIMOVA, who will appear in person to-night at the world's premiere of her picturization of Oscar Wilde's famous poetic drama, "Salome," at the Criterion. Mme. Nazimova will wear the same costume she wore in her film portrayal of the dancing girl of Herod's time.

ALBERTA BURTON, who plays the leading feminine rôle, that of Clare Jewett, in Channing Pollock's "fine experiment in serious amphitheatricals," the much-discussed "The Fool." Miss Burton succeeded Pamela Gaythorne, who was in the cast for two weeks only.

JOSE RUBEN, who, in the rôle of Tito el Torero, the bandit leader in Sophie Treadwell's Mexican play, "Gringo," gives, as Percy Hammond says, "an admirable and complete impersonation."

ESTELLE WINWOOD, who scintillates in the interesting rôle of a princess of Russia, residing in Paris, in that new comedy from the French of André Picard, "The Red Poppy," which opened at the Greenwich Village Theater last week.

Nickolas Muray, one of America's greatest portrait photographers, paints a few exclusive camera studies of interesting stage folk for the Tribune Graphic

Right—GENEVIEVE TOBIN, who is soon to appear in a new comedy by Guy Bolton, which Winchell Smith and F. Ray Comstock are producing. Remember Genevieve's sterling performance in "Little Old New York"?

Left—BLANCHE YURKA, who as Gertrude, the Queen Mother, in Arthur Hopkins' current presentation of "Hamlet," runs a close second in acting honors to the star, John Barrymore.

JULIA SILVERS, one of the silver-throated songbirds of the current "Greenwich Village Follies," whose trio of selections, "You Are My Rain-Beau," "Sweetheart Lane" and "Havana Nights," is most easy to listen to on.

Right—JACOB BEN-AMI, who plays the stellar rôle in "Johannes Kreisler" ("The Mysterious Tales of Hoffmann"), the fantastic melodrama in thirty-some scenes which the Selwyns presented for the first time in America at the Apollo last week.
